AFTERMATH OF CARNIVAL IN LOCAL POLICE COURT

The aftermath of the carnival as usual drifted into police court, and this morning Thos. McGee was the defendant in a disorderly conduct case. Sarah Sarver was the plaintiff. The two had met at the carnival Saturday night about 12 o'clock and after roaming about the grounds for a short time started home. The young man had a flask of whiskey in his pocket according to the evidence and judging from its appearance this morning, they both had been drinking freely. The girl admitted to taking two drinks, while McGee said she drank most all of the pint.

The parents of the young man reside on Morgan avenue and when the couple arrived at Eleventh and Schoonmaker they alighted from a street car and it seems she agreed to take her escort home. When they landed at the house the young man's mother ejected the girl from the place and the boy went with her and the two went up Ninth street as far as Knox and went over in the park where they remained until 2 a. m. Sunday morning.

Officer Stoll was out on his beat and he took charge of the girl as she emerged from the park grounds. She was crying and making a fuss and she told the officer that McGee got away with her keys and that she could not get into the house when she would get home. She accompanied the officer to the McGee home and they found McGee up stairs in bed. His clothes were searched and the girls pocket book and keys were found.

The young man was arrested at the instigation of the girl and her story was to the effect that she accompanied McGee from the carnival grounds and when they arrived at Ninth and Schoonmaker he attempted to assault her and that she started up Ninth street to go home and that she met the officer. She said McGee insulted her and that he was in an intoxicated condition.

After the young man gave his testimony there was a different light thrown on the situation. He admitted he was in the wrong, but he also told the burgess that he knew the reputation of the girl and that she was willing to go where he took her and that he believed she was out to make money, but that he gave her no money. He denied that he attempted to assault her and stated that the purse and keys were put in his pocket by the girl at the carnival grounds and that she forgot to take them out when the two separated at the park. The girl insisted that an attempt at assault had been made.

Burgess Dunlap knew the reputation of the girl and gave her a lecture and told her to get out of town and make a new start. He minimized the fine on McGee to $5.00 and costs, and it was paid.

Frank Lenyach of Eleventh street was given a choice of paying a fine of $4.00 or two days to the street. When told what his sentence would be he declared that he would not work on the street. He was put back in jail for the two days.

John Howat of Schoonmaker avenue, was up on the same old charge again. He had taken on too much booze Saturday night and proceeded to beat his wife. The police were called and placed him under arrest. This morning he was sentenced to five days on the street on account of lack of funds to pay his fine.

Alec Bukolasky of Schoonmaker avenue, paid a fine of $3.00 for being drunk and disorderly.

SERMON TO FATHERS

By request Dr. Keller of the English Lutheran church will on next Sunday morning preach to fathers. It is evident the "daddies" are not to be left out. There will probably be some skin grafting and every father ought to make a special effort to hear this sermon.

NO NEWS FROM LOCAL PEOPLE WHO SAILED ON STEAMER

Without doubt the three parties who left Monessen and who boarded the Lusitania at New York will be numbered among the lost. Their names have not appeared among the saved, and neither have they appeared among the known dead. Elbert Hubbard, Charles F. Klein and Charles Froman, famous Americans, are also lost. Elbert Hubbard as editor of the Frau and Philistine and a noted writer, was known throughout America and Europe, and the untimely end of his useful career will be generally deplored.

The total loss of life will reach more than 1,500 and many of the bodies are still in the ocean. While this awful catastrophe is generally deplored, by all concerns, it is not believed it will change our policies toward the warring nations.

Neither President Wilson nor his advisors are unmindful of the arguments that have been made to the effect that Germany would find considerable disadvantage in being at war with the United States. If she is to assert the right to sink passenger ships without warning, she would then be able to apply this rule to all American ships, and thus put a stop to the shipment of arms to the allies.

The size of the British navy has had no effect in halting raids of the German submarines. The added strength of the American navy, the German government probably realizes, would be equally ineffective against such a style of warfare while the size of the American army, the maximum number of men available being 65,000 makes that factor neglible.

Furthermore the bitterness of the allies makes it certain when if Germany is ultimately crushed the peace terms will be harsh, while if the United States were to be a participant in the peace treaty, the influence of this country would probably prevent the dismemberment of the German empire.

HOSPITAL GETS GOOD BOOST OUT OF COUNTRY STORE

Net proceeds from "Ye Old Country Store" conducted last week at the Hunter shows by the Board of Directors and the Ladies Auxiliary members of Monessen were $224.97, which was fully up to all expectations. There is but one expense to be deducted from this amount before it is turned over to the hospital, that for carpenters to tear down the building and the cost of any lumber that was sawed or damaged beyond use.

The Charleroi Lumber company, which has done considerable repair work about the hospital this year, kindly donated the use of the lumber as well as the hauling, charging only for labor and what lumber cannot be used again.

Saturday night at the close of the store, Harry C. Hunter donated $25 in cash to the receipts, which is included in the above amount. He expected and desired to do considerable more, but the weather has been so bad for his shows and the store that the committee did not feel like accepting a greater amount.

To the merchants of Monessen and Charleroi who so freely donated articles for the store and particularly to the women of the Ladies Auxiliary and young women of the two towns who so ably and loyally assisted, is credited the success of the enterprise, for which the Board of Directors desire to extend their apreciation through the public print.

The amount realized will be turned over to the hospital at Tuesday night's meeting this week.

MOTHERS' DAY FITTINGLY OBSERVED BY LOCAL CHURCHES

The observance of Mothers Day yesterday brought out an overflow crowd. It was announced that all Protestant churches of the town would hold a union service in commemoration of the day, at the Baptist church, but that church auditorium did not prove ample for the great turnout, and an overflow meeting had to be held in the Christian church, on Sixth street. Both churches were crowded and an appropriate and solemn service was held at each place. The pulpits were decorated with flowers, palms and ferns, and each one on entering the church was given the official flower, the carnation.

The meeting at the Baptist church was in charge of the Revs. Davies, Carson, Bungard and Jamieson and Rev. Davies delivered the sermon. At the Christian church, Revs. Swain, Keller and MacDonald were in charge and all delivered extemporaneous talks. Good music was furnished by the male chorus of Monessen. The attendance was the largest and the interest the greatest in any mothers day observed in Monessen.

Cubs Defeat the Iroquois

Saturday at Page park the Cubs defeated the Iroquois Indians by a score of 9-2. Heavy was on the mound for the Cubs and pitched an excellent game. Gibson, the great Mohawk pitcher, was on the mound for the Iroquois, but was in the air through the whole game. The Cubs were hitting Gibson too freely, he allowed 25 hits. Heavy only allowed 8 hits. The Mohawks always claimed Gibson a famous pitcher but he didn't show it Saturday against the Cubs.

The Cube are getting in fine shape to play the Mohawks some time in May to get even with the defeat they met two weeks ago. If Gibson is on the mound again against the Mohawks a victory is on hand for the Cubs. The Cubs and Iroquois Indians will meet again Saturday, May 15 at 2.30 sharp. The score by innings:

Cubs	0	2	6	0	0	0	0	1	x	—9

Court Will Be Delayed One Day

Judge L. W. Doty directed Prothonotary W. Dick Hunter on Friday to notify all Common Pleas court jurors drawn for the week beginning Monday, May 31 not to appear on that date, but to report on the following day, June 1. That order was made in view of the fact that Decoration Day comes on Sunday this year, and inasmuch as Monday, May 31 will be observed as Decoration Day, there will be no court held.

Weber and Heilbroner Straw Hats are Ready

NEW YORK'S newest straw hat is the "TAIHO" now on exhibition and sale at this store.

It is being shown at the same time in the nine Weber and Heilbroner hat stores in New York city—and in the leading store of each of several hundred other cities.

This hat conforms to the style requirements of the season in New York and is the representative hot weather hat of the metropolis.

It takes its name from the "Taiho" braid—specially imported from Japan for these hats, for which the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS have been secured by Weber and Heilbroner.

It is a smart, medium rough sennit, "picked up" by hand, giving it a different appearance from a machine-pressed hat—which always looks painfully perfect.

The "TAIHO" sells for $3—the standard price of the Weber and Heilbroner hats.

This store has the exclusive agency for these hats in this city.

All Have a Place

God—whose existence some folks are foolish enough to doubt—never builds in vain. The twinkling star, so far away that it is barely seen, does its work, has its use. The blind worm in the garden has his job and does it. The blade of grass, the drop of water, the ray of sunlight, the streak of moonlight, the tiny brook, the grain of dust, all these have their useful tasks and duties; they all serve, working according to God's plan.

An old man who was ragged and bent—a tramp—came into a Missouri town. Careless boys laughed at him. Girls giggled when they saw him. A policeman scowled at him. Common men who had jobs and a little money and fair clothes stared coldly at him. He begged in vain at several back doors. But finally one woman gave him something to eat, and to pay he offered to work in her flower garden. And he wrought wonders—for the poor old tramp had a place in the world and that place was to care for flowers.

His name—John Wilson—soon became a byword, for the kind woman hired him, and all of the citizens in the little town got into the habit of going over to John Wilson's garden to see how he did this and how he did that. How did he do things? Why he did them God's way. He knew how to cure sick geraniums. He knew how to make a pansy bloom right. He could tell in an instant what was the trouble with drooping sweet peas. He needed but one look and a second's time spent in diagnosis to discover the disease and find the remedy. And after he had taught the people in the Missouri town to plant and care for and love flowers, John Wilson closed his eyes in peace and went back to God.

His life had not been in vain. He had softened the hearts of all the people in one town. He had taught them the great lessons that there's good in every man, that there's a place and work for every man.

Watch Each Other

One philosopher says: "Keep your eye on your wife." Another says "Watch your husband." Both have studied life's dope sheet with profit. They know what they are talking about, these two thinkers. Of course. it's just as necessary for a wife to keep her eye on her husband as it is for a husband to keep his eye on his wife. For precisely the same reason, too. Milady, you should study your husband, for thus you shall keep him. Nobody, not even his mother, so well as you, knows what he likes—and dislikes, which is fully as important.

Think back to the time that you first saw him, and liked his get-up, and decided to snare him. Oh, you snared him, for it is just and mete that women should snare the men they want. Think back to those days, and the wiles you practiced, the way you drew him on and on—you were the nice spider and he the weak fly then—until finally he walked boldly into your net, believing in his egotistical way that he had captured you.

Do those little tricks again—tricks of the eye, trick of the slim ankle, tricks of the Dutch yoke; those little tricks which finally started you two, arm in arm, toward the altar, every nerve throbbing, every thought good, every honest impulse yours.

Be just a little bit unattainable, beyond reach, tantalizingly elusive—for elusiveness is woman's chief charm; man must be made to believe that he is a fierce pursuer.

And finally be a good wife, than which there is nothing more noble on earth. That is what "Watch Your Husband" means.

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D. LL. D., Commissioner of Health

SUNLIGHT

For the vast majority of plants sunlight is an absolute necessity. They cannot grow and thrive without it. It is of almost equal importance to human beings though comparatively few people recognize the fact.

When we walk into a house where the sun streams through the windows and brightens everything, instinctively we say "what a cheerful place." The stimulating effects of sunshine are difficult to estimate but they are never-the-less a potent factor in maintaining our physical and mental health.

It has been said that suicides are more prevalent following a period of rainy and depressing weather, and figures have been advanced to show that they are more common among people who have rooms with a northern exposure lacking sunlight.

We all know how one's spirits are depressed by a succession of rainy days but we lack a full appreciation of the value of sunlight in our homes.

The germs of tuberculosis for example, will not survive for any length of time if exposed to the sun's rays. It is a mistake to so protect our windows with shutters or curtains as to make it impossible to secure the maximum of sunlight. This is especially true in the fall and winter when the days are short, but at all seasons of the year sunlight is invigorating and stimulating and almost as much a necessity as fresh air.

The planting of trees so close to houses that they shut off the sun's rays is a mistake from a health standpoint. Sun baths are beneficial in stimulating the functions of the skin, sometimes to a degree which enables it to resist minor ailments.

Rostraver Twp. Schools Close

The schools of Rostraver township close this week, and the sixth annual commencement takes place in the Rehoboth church on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The class of 1915 consists of 42 members and the program is not as lengthy as that of last year. The class address will be made by Dr. Ezra F. Baker, president of Waynesburg college. The music will be by Gladys Harvey, Ruth Harvey, Maude Clegg and Norman Sterner.

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicines I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines but I know this is good."—Mrs. E. J. RICKETS, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

When Billy Sunday Came to Town

By ALEXANDER CORKEY

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Reginald Nelson, a young Englishman of high birth, comes to this country to win fame and fortune. On the steamer he meets Albert Townley, a minister, Mrs. Graham and her pretty daughter, Joy.

Reginald goes to Bronson, home of his three new acquaintances, where he learns that Joy's father is a leading lawyer, who is the mainstay of a corrupt political ring. He gets a job.

The young Englishman enters the social life of Bronson. He falls in love with Joy, and later discovers that she is engaged to be married to Roland Gregory.

Allan Rutledge, another minister, and the Rev. Mr. Townley confer on the evil moral and laboring conditions in Bronson. The reform element meets and decides to have Billy Sunday, the noted evangelist aid in a "cleanup."

Editor Marchmount offers Reginald a position on his paper. The latter accepts, and later he performs a heroic act in stopping a dangerous runaway.

Nelson starts on his work on the Courier. He begins to investigate the suspicious death of Mae Mobray, a youthful worker in Roland Gregory's factory plant. The councilmen and saloon keepers oppose the coming of Billy Sunday.

A tabernacle is built for Billy Sunday, and Reginald, in the columns of the Courier, begins a spirited campaign in favor of the evangelist. Sunday holds his first meeting in Bronson.

Much to the anger of Mr. Graham and Bud McCrea, a councilman, Sunday's work proves effective as an attack on vice. "By the help of God we'll clean up Bronson," says Sunday.

On a Sunday afternoon the reformer makes a powerful attack on gambling and saloons and hypocrisy. He describes saloons as "breeders of lawlessness."

Joy finds it impossible to prevail on Roland Gregory, her fiance, to join the church. Mr. Rutledge gets hold of the "fatal ring" that poor little Mae Mobray wore at the time of her mysterious death.

Reginald and the two ministers, Allan Rutledge and Albert Townley, resolve to make a tour of the vicious resorts in Bronson and expose the whole disgrace.

A detective takes Reginald and his associates through the slums. They see gambling and all night drunkenness. The politicians are enraged at this action.

Lawyer Graham conspires with McCrea, Roland Gregory and others to ruin Reginald and drive him out of the city. They plan to first get him off the staff of the Courier.

The Fourth of July celebration is made the occasion of an attack on the city government by Allan Rutledge and Reginald Nelson. The Courier is purchased by Graham and a clique of schemers, and they notify Reginald of his discharge as editor.

Joy Graham shows increased interest in Reginald. Ned Rowlands, an incompetent, becomes editor of the Courier. Mr. Graham and others circulate false stories about Reginald.

"I heard that story about a wife in England long ago," responded the girl with disgust. "Roland told it to me at first, and I thought there might be something to it as Mr. Nelson has been so silent about his life in England, but I persuaded Mrs. Rutledge to ask him, and she says his look of amazement at such a charge convinced her of the absolute falsity of the slander."

"The only excuse there is for these stories is the fact that Mr. Nelson has been so quiet about his English life, as you just said," interposed George Caldwell, thoughtfully.

The motorcar was rapidly approaching the Derwent home. "I have not been out here since the night of our sleigh ride party," said the girl. "What a lovely time we had that evening. Ah, there's the home!" she exclaimed as the car shot round a bend in the road.

On every side the well tilled fields gave evidence of the prosperity of the farmers, and an air of peace and contentment brooded over the countryside. "This was an ideal place for Mr. Nelson to come," said Joy Graham, with enthusiasm, as the motorcar climbed the little hill that led into the yard of the Derwent farm.

It was still early in the evening, and Mr. Derwent was attending to the usual evening chores, while Mrs. Derwent and Vivian were busy in the house. Reginald Nelson was sitting alone on the ample porch which extended across the entire front side of the home. He had been thinking to himself about his future plans.

"I am almost well again," he thought. "I must plan for my next move. If only I were able I would like to start a real newspaper of my own in Bronson. I believe I could win in spite of McCrea, Graham, Gregory, the Courier and the very devil himself," he said to himself confidently.

At the supper that evening Mr. Derwent had commented on the loss of patronage which the Courier was sustaining. "I came to Bronson at the psychological moment," Reginald meditated. "I seem to have been outwitted in the first skirmish, but I will win in the end, so help me God!"

There was a look of intenseness and determination on his face as he gave himself to these reflections. He was still pale, but the light had come back to his eyes, and he was regaining his strength in a remarkable way. He noticed the automobile speeding along the road and soon recognized it as George Caldwell's. A moment more and the car stopped in the yard a few feet from where he sat, and Joy Graham was shouting to him:

"Splendid, Mr. Nelson! Splendid! You are a well man again!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Business Venture.

In a few moments Vivian came out, and George Caldwell also joined the company on the porch. After a little while Joy Graham turned to George and Vivian, who were sitting together on a settee, and said: "Won't you two please excuse Mr. Nelson and myself? I want to talk a little business to him privately."

Leaving them on the porch, Reginald and Joy Graham sauntered out into a pasture field.

"I have come to see you this evening about your future plans," said the girl. "It may seem improper for a young woman in my place to do this, but I am not doing it for your sake, remember. I am thinking of the honor of our family and also of the good of Bronson. We need just such a paper in Bronson as you had made the Courier—a newspaper that has principle and which stands for the welfare of the community at all times. I want you to originate and control just such a newspaper in Bronson. I have even named this new paper. It will be called the Bronson Tribune, and the editor of it will be Reginald Nelson."

The ex-editor looked in astonishment at the girl by his side.

"Tell me what you mean," Reginald responded after a brief pause.

"I have a little fortune which was left to me by my mother's family," Joy Graham continued. "This came into my entire control when I was eighteen, and I want to use a part of it in this enterprise for the good of Bronson. I said I believed in you. Now I will prove it."

The girl stopped and opened a handbag which she carried on her left arm. She took out a small package and handed it to Reginald. "You will find $5,000 in that package," she said. "At the end of a month Mr. Davis Parker, the lawyer, will give you another package of bills of equal amount, and in still another month you will get $5,000 more. I want to intrust this to you that you may establish with it a real newspaper which will make effective in our social life the teachings of Mr. Sunday and Dr. Rutledge."

Reginald Nelson was too amazed to speak for a moment, and he stood holding the package which the girl had given him, looking alternately from it to his companion.

"I understand," he answered slowly, "but I could not think of thus risking your inheritance."

"It is a matter of business, remember," said the girl, with determination.

"The newspaper is to belong to you, then?" After a silence Reginald spoke thus to the girl.

"Yes," she answered, "but my part in the enterprise is, of course, to remain a secret for the present. Mr. Davis Parker will act as my trustee, and you will never need to consult with me directly in regard to anything connected with the Bronson Tribune, as he will be my agent."

Reginald Nelson knew Mr. Davis Parker well. He was one of the rising young lawyers in Bronson, and in company with several other members of the Bronson bar he had "hit the sawdust trail" during the tabernacle meetings.

"I think I understand your proposition, Miss Graham, and I accept it, assuring you that I will guarantee you against any financial loss. I am glad to say that I can make good this guarantee some time."

"No guarantee is necessary," replied the girl stoutly. "I am making a business investment."

"The enterprise will succeed," said Reginald, his enthusiasm beginning to awaken as he saw his life plans open before him.

"When do you think you can bring out the first edition of the Tribune?" asked Joy as they neared the Derwent home.

"I will return to Bronson tomorrow," rejoined Reginald, "and I think I can rent a building, get machinery and workmen together so that I can begin publication within a month or six weeks."

"Where have you two been?" asked the farmer's daughter when they had reached the porch. "If I see any more of this, Joy, I shall be compelled to speak to Roland."

"Don't worry," replied Joy, with a wan little smile. "Mr. Nelson and I have finished all the business discussion we will ever need to have together. I came to announce to him that he is to be the editor of a new paper which will soon be published in Bronson."

On the following day, to the surprise of friends and enemies alike, Reginald Nelson appeared in Bronson and commenced at once his plans for the publication of the Bronson Tribune.

When Mr. Graham and Roland Gregory returned from their trip to the east, where they had engaged a new editor at a high salary, they were astounded to hear of Reginald Nelson's sudden reappearance in Bronson and of his contemplated plans for a rival newspaper.

"It is a bluff," said Mr. Graham, in astonishment, when he first heard the news. "The fellow will not dare to do that."

If Mr. Graham was astonished when he first heard of Reginald Nelson's purpose to start a rival newspaper, he was dumfounded the next day at something still more amazing to him. Davis Parker, the young lawyer who was the legal adviser of the reform element, called on him and paid in full the amount of the judgment against Reginald for his shares of stock in the Courier Publishing company.

"Do you want to purchase these shares which Mr. Nelson owns?" asked the young lawyer after he had settled the judgment by depositing with Mr. Graham the cash for the full amount.

"At what price will he sell them?" asked Mr. Graham in response.

"He has authorized me to sell them to you at the same price he paid for them. If you do not buy them he will advertise them for sale in his own paper which will be issued in a few weeks."

"The shares are not worth what he paid for them now," responded the lawyer, somewhat off his guard.

"All right," answered Davis Parker; "he will advertise them and get what he can out of them. He does not wish to have any connection henceforth with the Courier."

Before leaving Mr. Graham's office Davis Parker gave the older lawyer a still more severe shock by remarking: "You have been publishing a number of defamatory articles for over a month in regard to Mr. Nelson. I am sure you know you have already laid yourself liable to a suit for libel. However, Mr. Nelson will pay no attention to what has already been printed in your newspaper, but if you mention him again in any such way he has ordered me to begin a suit for damages immediately."

At a conference of Bud McCrea's friends, which was held that evening in the Courier office, the sudden turn of affairs was discussed by the discouraged conspirators.

"I thought we had that —— fellow, Nelson, fixed," exclaimed McCrea with an oath.

One of the councilmen of the city was present and he informed them that a reform ticket had already been agreed on by the "Rutledge crowd," as he called the reformers.

"I heard about that," said Roland Gregory. "I understand they have put up Edgar Prince's name for mayor, and George Caldwell, Dr. Gracely and Mr. Cameron have been picked out for councilmen. Think of it?"

Bud McCrea frowned darkly as he heard these names spoken which he well knew boded no good to his empire in Bronson.

"That fellow, Nelson, —— him, is at the bottom of it all. He is worse than the preachers. Can't we make away with him?"

"You are right, McCrea," chimed in Roland Gregory. "If I got a good chance I would like to rid our community of that fellow myself."

"Who is this fellow, Nelson?" asked McCrea.

Mr. Graham told the history of Reginald as far as he knew it, speaking of the letter which he had received from London a short time before.

"I am convinced there is something in his record in England, if we can get hold of it, which will enable us to hurl him out of our community," said Mr. Graham earnestly. "Let us keep quiet for a few weeks and I will investigate."

Altogether innocent of the further efforts which were being made to discredit and ruin him, Reginald Nelson was working like a Trojan getting his new publishing plant in order. Fortunately a few days before the visit of Joy Graham to the Derwent farm the he fortified himself with a few more glasses, he wended his way to the Tribune office.

"Good morning, Mr. Gregory," said Reginald. He wondered at the visit, for he was soon to confront Roland with his knowledge of the Mobray girl's ring. The marriage of Roland and Joy now seemed impossible. "I hope you like Bronson's new paper," he added.

"To h—l with your paper!" replied the other fiercely. "What do you mean by sending a spy to my factory to sneak around and find out about my private affairs?"

"If I have overstepped my rights as an editor the law courts are open," declared Reginald firmly.

"I'll soon have you in court!" shouted the other, attempting to strike the editor in the face. Reginald saw that his visitor was partially intoxicated. He warded off the blow which Roland Gregory aimed at him and seized him by the collar. Shaking him roughly, the editor marched the helpless manufacturer before him out of his private office and gave him a push into the street.

After a talk with Mr. Rutledge that night about Gregory and Mae Mobray's ring Reginald called at Roland Gregory's office.

NEED MORE MONEY AT HARRISBURG

It is understood at Harrisburg that it is the plan to have a new economy and efficiency commission. The commission may or may not be formally constituted. It will consist of the Givernor, Attorney General and Auditor General. and will go over the state government and its methods. It is said to be the plan of the Governor to undertake the study of the government after the session ends and to make some sweeping recommendations to the next Legislature.

The bill contains several increases for departments, including some provided by legislation such as that reorganizing the attorney general's department and providing for additional forces for the Department of Labor and Industry. A number of items formerly carried in the miscellaneous list are transferred to departments. among them $75,000 for advertising constitutional amendments, which is placed under control of the secretary of the commonwealth with a proviso that some of it shall be available for paying claims for advertising that may be passed by the Board of Public accounts, to which the Governor suggested those not satisfied should apply.

Some of the Auditor General's items are also from the miscellaneous list, such as the $25,000 item for escheat expenses, which was $100,000 last session, and the costs of suits against delinquent corporations which is $30,000 against $35,000 last time. Uniform primary cost is cut from $980,000 to $800,000. If the Sproul bill passes this item will be eliminated.

The committee has restored to the Internal Affairs department some of the cuts made by Gov. John K. Tener. The $400 for a clerk to the Board of Public Property is back again and the clerks and employes are allowed $78,400, against $55,000 which was given by Gov. Tener. The contingent expenses cut to $3.000 two years ago are put at $4,500, while the item for statistics, etc., cut to $5,000 by Mr. Tener is back at $10,000. The Bureau of Railways which was allowed $1,000 in the final cut in 1913, is put in at $3,000. Four thousand was asked this year. The item for boundary line survey which was cut out two years ago appears for $2,000, a reduction from $3,000 asked.

SUFFRAGE VOTE A CERTAINTY ON NOVEMBER 2ND

State Officials Assure Women That Their Amendment Will Have Place on the Ballot

Harrisburg, May 3.—Suffragists of Pennsylvania need have no fears that any legal obstacles will arise between now and November to prevent a vote of the people upon the suffrage amendment on election day. An opinion has been handed down by the Secretary of State and concurred in by the Attorney General that no further legislation will be required in order to have the constitutional amendment providing for woman suffrage placed upon the ballots this year.

MRS. FRANK M. ROESSING

The opinion was secured at the request of Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association, and Miss Hannah J. Patterson, State Chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party of Pennsylvania.

Following reports from New Jersey to the effect that special legislation would have to be passed there in order to have the suffrage amendment voted on there this year, Mrs. Roessing and Miss Patterson immediately consulted the Hon. Cyrus E. Woods, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. They asked him if it would be necessary to have a special bill introduced into the legislature here providing for the inclusion of the suffrage amendment on the regular ballot at the November elections.

After a consultation with Mr. George D. Thorn, the legislative expert for the Department of State, Secretary Woods stated that there is a general act which provides for all the necessary steps that have to be taken in connection with the presentation of such an amendment and that no special act of the legislature would be necessary. Secretary Woods added that the Attorney General, Mr. Francis Shunk Brown, had been consulted and had officially concurred in this opinion

Speaking of the status of the suffrage amendment today, Mrs. Roessing said:

"All the details in connection with the presentation of the amendment in November, so far as compliance with the election laws are concerned, have been taken care of. It is now a certainty that the question of woman suffrage will be voted on by the people on November second."

As to my views on the woman suffrage movement. I am glad to say that I am unqualifiedly in favor of granting women the right to vote in all elections—local, state and national—Dr. William M. Davidson.

Aged Physician Has Birthday Celebration

Doctor John S. VanVoorhis of Belle Vernon, celebrated his ninety- third birthday on Saturday. The doctor was ninety-two years old, but it was his ninety-third birthday. The day was spent in receiving friends who wished the doctor many more such days and congratulated him on reaching such an advanced age. About forty guests were present, the doctor and his wife keeping open house.

Dr. VanVoorhis is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson college, class of 1844, and is the only living member of that class. Three years later he was graduated from Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, and entered upon the practice of his profession.

During the seventy years of his practice he has conducted into this world 1,878 babies, and many of them, now well up in years came themselves to offer congratulations on Saturday.

The doctor is more than a physician. He is a historian of note and a statesman as well. Of his historical writings, perhaps the best known is a volumn of nearly 500 pages, "The Old and New Monongahela" published in 1893, and contains much valuable information concerning the settlement of this great valley.

The doctor is an uncle of Mrs. Harry Irwin of Reed avenue.
